

ADRIC - RICS Canada Adjudicator Training Program

Module 3 - ADRIC-RICS Adjudicator Training Program

Prompt payment and construction adjudication legislation is being introduced across Canada at the provincial and federal levels.

Good construction adjudicators combine extensive industry experience with a thorough knowledge of adjudication law and procedure and an ability to determine disputes in a pragmatic, efficient and robust manner.

Qualified adjudicator certification (Q.Adj) adds prestige and weight to your career as an adjudicator, an adjudication advocate, or the go-to person in your organisation when construction disputes arise.

This comprehensive 28 hour* training program, builds on your Module 2 training - Advising and representing parties in adjudications.

This course is broken into units and is delivered over four to five weeks to allow time for study and preparation between sessions.

It covers the remaining knowledge and competencies you need to practise as a construction adjudicator, with specific focus on :

- applicable common and statutory law,
- adjudication practice,
- managing the adjudication process and
- determination writing

* This programme involves 28 hours contact teaching time – you will need at least the same amount of time for preparatory reading and study.

Who should attend?

This program is designed to train construction, engineering and related professionals in the law, practice and procedure of construction adjudication.

Construction adjudicators are usually drawn from contractors, quantity surveyors, architects, engineers, project managers and lawyers with a construction orientated practice.

Note: Module 2 and Module 3 are mandatory for candidates wishing to train as adjudicators.

Training Dates:

Sessions between 15 March 2022 to 12 April 2022

Available after Module 2

Professional Development Accreditation:

- Eligible for ADRIC Continuing Education & Engagement (CEE) points
- CPD accreditation pending from all Canadian law societies and other professional bodies

Certification: ADRIC-RICS Certificate in Adjudication

Panel membership: This qualification enables you, with additional documentation, verification and a successful interview, to apply for the Q.Adj. credential from ADRIC, and for membership of the ADRIC-RICS Canada Adjudicator Panel subject to additional requirements of the criteria and completion of an application form.

Fee: $2595 plus applicable taxes

Assessment:

This module is subject to formal assessment in the form of a written examinations, a multiple choice test and a practical adjudication determination writing exercise.